

Indigenous Mental Health & Addictions Crisis Counsellors

JOB OPPORTUNITY

Nimkee Nupigawagan Healing Centre is a community-based Indigenous organization providing culturally grounded, holistic mental health and wellness services guided by Indigenous worldviews, self-determination, and OCAP® principles. The Centre is seeking Indigenous Mental Health & Addictions Crisis Counsellors to join a part-time counsellor pool delivering front-line, culturally safe crisis response and short-term counselling to Indigenous individuals, families, and communities.

The role focuses on crisis intervention, mental health and addictions support, and community-based healing using trauma-informed, harm-reduction, and Indigenous cultural approaches. Counsellors collaborate with Elders, Knowledge Keepers, and community partners while supporting individuals experiencing grief, intergenerational trauma, substance use challenges, and emotional distress.

Candidates should have relevant education or equivalent lived/community experience, crisis or mental health support experience, and a strong understanding of Indigenous cultural safety and colonial impacts. Flexible scheduling is required, including possible evenings or on-call shifts. Positions are part-time with compensation up to approximately $50,000, depending on hours and experience. Preference is given to qualified First Nations applicants.

ACCESSIBILITY AND ACCOMMODATION If you require accommodation, please reach out to the employer for arrangements hr@nimkee.org or if you would like full job description.

How to Apply

Nimkee Nupigawagan Healing Centre encourages applications from Indigenous candidates and is committed to employment equity.

We thank all applicants for their interest; only those selected for an interview will be contacted. Preference will be given to qualified First Nations applicants in accordance with section 16(1) of the Canadian Human Rights Act.
